Life Skills

Spring 2

What makes me, me?

Things That Make Us Special

We are all special and unique. This is exciting! There are lots of ways we are different from other people and this is something to be proud of. These might be things we like, things we are good at or things we are interested in.

Feeling good about the ways we are unique is a way we can be kind to ourselves.

Talking About Our Feelings

By talking about how we feel, we can get help if we are worried, understand someone else's point of view about a situation, and learn from people we care about. We all experience lots of different feelings. We might feel happy, sad, angry, calm, lonely, excited or lots of other feelings too. Some of these will feel comfortable and some may feel uncomfortable. Every feeling is OK. If we are worried about anything at all or feel uncomfortable emotions, it is very important to talk to a trusted adult.

Managing Our Uncomfortable Feelings

We all feel lots of different emotions. Some will be comfortable, and some will be uncomfortable and this is OK. It can be helpful to know some ways to help ourselves cope with uncomfortable emotions. We could cry to let our feelings out, exercise to help our mood, listen to music to help ourselves feel calm or express our emotions and talk to someone we trust.

Feeling Happy

When we feel happy it is often because we are pleased with something. This may be when we are doing things we enjoy or when we are with people we enjoy spending time with. Because we are all different, different things will make us happy.
