The Colour Wheel

Complementary colours are opposite each other on the colour wheel.

Edvard Munch: The Scream 1893

The Scream is an icon of modern art. It is considered autobiographical and an expressionist construction. Munch was inspired by a scream he heard that pierced through the air during a walk in nature. He was struggling with his mental health at the time and his mind was considered to be in an 'abnormal state'. There are four versions of 'The Scream' that were made using oil and tempera paint and pastel and crayon on cardboard. The pop artist, Andy Warhol, created silk print based on 'The Scream'.

Henri Matisse: The Fall of Icarus 1947

This work by Matisse relates to the Greek myth of Icarus who "with a passionate heart, falls out of the sky".

Henri Matisse: Les Codomas (two famous trapeze artists) 1947

Henri Matisse

Matisse was a French painter who was famous for his use of bright colours, bold shapes, and his unique approach to art-making. He was especially famous for his collages, which were made up of cut-out shapes of brightly colored paper. He said he "painted with scissors".
